

A Message from the Dean, Professor Mojgan Lotfi

For over a hundred years, we've been proud to shape the future of healthcare—educating passionate nursing and midwifery professionals from across Iran and beyond. Today, that proud legacy continues stronger than ever.

Each year, more than 900 students join us at undergraduate, master's, and doctoral levels. Our programs are nationally ranked, and we are deeply committed to expanding our impact—both across the country and on the global stage.

What truly defines our faculty is our energy, innovation, and unwavering dedication to progress. These values inspire us every day to train future leaders in nursing, conduct cutting-edge research, and develop pioneering educational programs that elevate nursing science and healthcare.

We believe in hands-on, meaningful learning. Whether through advanced simulation labs or innovative, student-centered teaching methods, we are preparing tomorrow's nurses and midwives to lead with knowledge, compassion, and skill. Our national network for nursing and midwifery research and technology ensures that students have access to the latest advancements and opportunities.

We are also passionate about making a real difference—addressing national healthcare challenges such as the nursing and midwifery workforce shortage. Through strong collaborations with healthcare organizations, government bodies, and interdisciplinary partners, we continue to enhance training, support our faculty, and improve the quality and reach of nursing research.

Looking ahead, our vision is clear: to create an inspiring, supportive, and inclusive educational environment, enriched by strong partnerships both locally and globally. We're investing in our people, empowering our students and staff, and working toward becoming a fourth-generation university that leads with impact.

For me personally, this faculty is home. It's where I began my journey in nursing, where I first discovered the profound meaning of care and the deep love for humanity that this profession demands. That spirit of compassion, respect, and human dignity is at the heart of everything we do here.

To all prospective students, partners, and visitors:

We warmly invite you to join us.

Be part of a community that is transforming lives through education, research, and care.

With warm regards,

Mojgan Lotfi
